State of Maine Pageant at Bath

This state's first pageant, and the biggest single entertainment enterprise in the history of Maine, with Governor Brewster as one of the chief actors in the cast of 1,000 people, opens at Bath on Saturday, and arrangements have been completed for the welcoming of the greatest influx of visitors in years.

A special committee, appointed by Mayor Charles Cahill, will serve as a general hospitality delegation, supervising accommodations for those who remain over night or for several days. These accommodations include rooms, meals, garage or parking space and information regarding the pageant, the Governor's Day exercises on Monday, the firemen's muster on the Fourth and all the other events of the five-day pageant period.

While the official opening of the Pageant will take place on Saturday night at eight o'clock, several thousand children from all parts of the state will be the first to see the big outdoor drama. A matinee will be given on Friday afternoon at three o'clock at which adults will be admitted only if they bring one or more children. Tickets for the children will be twenty-five cents apiece and those for adults one dollar. These prices will apply to the box seats or any section of the reserved stands those arriving first getting their choice of seats.

Col. E. A. Robbins of Camden, chairman of the Pageant Executive Committee, announces that the Navy is sending two cruisers and a submarine to be present on Monday, July 2, at the official dedication of the Carlton Bridge. If fair weather prevails on the Fourth of July, the dirigible Los Angeles will come from Bar Harbor and circle the city, flying over the pageant grounds during the afternoon performance of the pageant.

Prospective visitors are reminded by the Executive Committee that tolls have been suspended on the Carlton Bridge during the entire pageant period.

Night rehearsals of the pageant have been in progress all this week, beginning with a full dress rehearsal on Monday night. The 193rd Infantry Band of Lewiston has also been quartered here and has been perfecting the musical features of the program. A detail of militia under Adj. Gen. James W. Hanson has been encamped for the last six days on the pageant grounds, whose whole area, from the entrances to the costume, dressing, property, make-up and other buildings, has been strung with lights. Troops police the grounds and stand guard over the properties and other paraphernalia of the show. More than two miles of telephone wire have been used in connecting up the buildings and various acting areas. Governor Brewster will broadcast at seven o'clock, standard time, Thursday evening from WCSH, Portland, the final news regarding the pageant, and the other events attending the dedication of the Carlton Bridge.

Mrs. Mabel Clough is at Hanover nursing.

Fritz Tyler is putting up a camp at Songo Pond.

Eyes examined, glasses furnished by E. L. Greenleaf, Optometrist, over Howe's Store, Saturdays only. Evening appointments may be made.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

By one of those coincidences which are innumerable, the number 239 has double significance in relation to the boys and girls club enrollment for the first half of June. First the enrollment was increased by that amount and now totals 4,008 for the state, and second, the total enrollment is exactly 239 ahead of what it was last year on similar date.

Oxford county is still far out in the front but second third and fourth positions are closely contested. Aroostook and Twin counties forced Kennebec from second to fourth position. The Aroostookans added 81 additional members and brought their total to 332 while Twin added 18 and moved up to 220, Kennebec standing fourth adding 32 and Franklin was next in line with 31.

Washington county club members have the greatest increase this year over last year on similar date with 150, closely followed by Oxford with 147, Aroostook and Kennebec follow in order.

Twin counties have greater enrollment than they had last year on June 15, while five counties, Aroostook, Kennebec, Knox-Lincoln, Oxford and Washington have larger enrollment now than was their final enrollment last year.

To Kennebec county, however, goes the distinction of having the largest enrollment they ever had on June 15, 15, this being the only county to retain that distinction, which several claimed earlier in the season.

Following is the enrollment by counties: Aroostook, 332; Cumberland, 303; Franklin, 31; Hancock, 265; Kennebec, 219; Knox-Lincoln, 187; Oxford, 147; Penobscot, 231; Piscataquis, 218; Somerset, 220; Waldo, 309; Washington, 273 and York, 231.

Mrs. Ellen E. Blake

Mrs. Ellen E. Blake, widow of William H. Blake, died at her home on Main Street South Paris, Sunday forenoon. She had been in failing health for some years, but a few weeks ago, she fell from a chair and cracked a bone in her hip and since then had steadily failed. Her age was 91 years. She was the daughter of Stephen and Lorinda (Wilkins) Lovejoy and was born Nov. 10, 1836, at Watford.

She had twice been married. Her first husband was Cyrus A. Lord. To them were born two children. Her second husband was William H. Blake of South Paris. Two children were born to them, William Albert and Sarah Lorinda, widow of Ernest Parlin. Mrs. Blake was highly esteemed by the entire community and dearly beloved by her neighbors to whom she had been a life-long true friend.

She is survived by her sons, S. Augustus Lord, and William A. Blake, her daughter, Mrs. Sarah Parlin, who has faithfully and lovingly cared for her in her declining years, a grandson, Richard Blake, a granddaughter, Mrs. Athie Vail, and six great grandchildren.

BEAR RIVER GRANGE
Regular meeting of Bear River Grange was held Saturday evening, June 23. Meeting in form. Officers absent: Flora, Chaplain and Gate Keeper. Chaired by Gwendolyn Godwin, Elita Brink and E. E. Bennett.

Alfred E. Morse

A widely known citizen of South Paris was Alfred E. Morse, to whom death came very suddenly on Sunday. Up to Thursday, preceding his death, when he suffered a slight heart attack, he had been in his usual health. Sunday morning he arose as usual, but fell dead before completing his toilet.

Mr. Morse was the son of Deneon Elsha and Anna G. (Parsons) Morse, and was born Nov. 2, 1847, in South Paris, of which place he has always been a resident, living at the old home on Oxford Street. He married Miss Jennie M. Bartlett and to them was born one daughter, Nellie. Mrs. Morse died some years ago. For many years he and his sister, Miss Anna Morse constituted the household.

Mr. Morse was a member of the Odd Fellows, the Rebekahs and the Grange. For thirteen years he was Chaplain of the Maine State Grange. As a sort of side issue in his life he was an important and enterprising, with a distinctive style of his own. He had entertained in many towns in Maine, and was always greeted with enthusiasm when presented to an audience. Through his membership in the several organizations and his services as an entertainer in various places, he had acquired a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

He leaves one daughter, Nellie, wife of Irving E. Andrews of South Paris, with whom of late Mr. Morse has made his home, and two grand children, Ralph Andrews of Haverhill, Mass., and Mrs. Eva Evira of Norway and one great-grandchild, Margaret Andrews.

The funeral was held at the home, at 2 p. m., Tuesday, attended by Rev. R. H. Colby. He was buried in Riverside Cemetery.

George Whitefield Mason

Died June 19th, 1928

Another one of Bethel's aged and much respected citizens has finished his earthly tasks and passed on to the Land of Rest of which it is written, there is no night, neither sickness or sorrow.

Mr. Mason was the youngest son of Sylvanus Mason, Sr., and Lydia Scribner Mason. He was born in Bethel nearly 82 years ago, and has always lived on the homestead farm at North-west, Bethel.

In early manhood he was united in marriage to Dora Bennett, who died of pneumonia five years ago.

Of the children born to them two are living, Mrs. Lilla Mason Skilling of Portland and Mrs. Helen Mason Perkins who has always lived at the old home and has been ever faithful in caring for her father, always ready to fulfill his slightest wish, seemingly anticipating his wants, and doing for his comfort.

There are four grandchildren, Mrs. Thomas Quinn of Portland, George Mason Schools of Bethel, Miss Dora H. Perkins who is employed in Portland, and Ernest A. Perkins of Bethel, and there is also one great-grandson, Master Edward Quinn of Portland. One aged brother, E. L. Mason, survives, the last of a family of seven boys who lived to be old men.

Mr. George Mason was of a quiet nature, and had done much work with tools. In his young days he had worked at bridge building when covered wooden bridges were depended on, but for a number of years his health had been poor and carrying on the farm had been all he could tend to.

A kind neighbor, he will be long held in tender memory by those with whom he was associated. As we think of him we can truly say—His was a long life, well spent. For, living the "Golden Rule," he lived content.

And while we mourn because he has gone from us "Yet Love will dream, and Faith will trust. Since He who knows our needs is just. That somehow, somewhere, meet we must!"

Funeral services were held at his late residence June 22nd, where many came to pay their last tribute of respect. Rev. W. R. Patterson spoke very tenderly to the sorrowing ones.

The body was laid away in the family lot at West Bethel. The bearers were Edward A. Skilling, Henry Skilling, Herbert Mason and Leo Mason.

Rumford Community Hospital Tag Day

Next Saturday, June 29, is the Annual Tag Day for the Rumford Community Hospital, and it is hoped that Bethel and vicinity will respond generously to this splendid cause.

Mrs. G. L. Thurston has charge of the drive in Bethel and will be assisted by an able committee of young ladies.

William F. Eldredge and his son, Arthur, motored from Rockport, Mass., Saturday. They will return on Monday, accompanied by Mrs. Eldredge. The latter has been in town for a week visiting her mother Mrs. Angela Clark. Mrs. Henry W. Cobb (nee Lizzie Mason) and Miss Cora Butler, both of Woodford, also spent the week end with Mrs. Clark.

Hudson—Frost

Miss Marion Holt Frost, daughter of the late Albert O. and Edna H. Frost, was married to Mr. Percy Alfred Hudson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hudson of Canterbury Eng., at the Universalist Church in Bethel, Wednesday evening, June 20, at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. L. A. Edwards, pastor of the Congregational Church, officiated, using the double ring service.

The wedding party entered the church to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. Ande G. Willey. First came the ushers, cousins of the bride, Miss Gwendolyn Godwin and Miss Dorothy Edwards of Bethel, and Mrs. Olive Willey Hannaford of Bar Mills; next the tiny flower girl, little Arline Ames of Keene, N. H., in pale green crepe. Miss Dorris Frost, maid of honor, sister of the bride was dressed in ecru lace and georgette and carried a shower bouquet. The bride, who entered on the arm of her uncle, Mr. F. L. Edwards, was beautifully gowned in old ivory kittens ear crepe with rose point lace and carried pink roses.

The altar where the groom and the clergyman waited was decorated with graceful birch trees, bridal wreath and lilies of the valley with baskets of ladies slippers and candles in the windows. Friends of the bride arranged the decorations, planned by Mrs. Daniel R. Smith.

From the church, the wedding party hurried to the Edwards home on Main Street, where they held an informal reception. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. A. G. Wiley of Bar Mills, and Miss Frost assisted in receiving the many friends who assembled to congratulate the happy couple.

The spacious rooms were gay with cut flowers and bridal wreath. The usher served dainty refreshments in the dining room and in the reception room tables held the wedding gifts which included many gold pieces, silver, cut glass and crystal and beautiful pieces of embroidery, while many more gifts are awaiting in the new home at 50 Marlboro Street, Keene, N. H.

Mrs. Hudson was born and educated in Bethel, graduating from Gould Academy and Castine Normal School. She taught in Maine for a time then went to Keene Normal School where she was instructor of History. She is a member of Sunset Rebekah Lodge and O. E. S.

Mr. Hudson is a commercial photographer in Keene, N. H. He belongs to the Lodge of the Temple, Keene, and is an A. I. & A. M. He is a graduate of Dean Payne-Smith School of Canterbury, Eng.

The bride's going away gown was a photopart brown with hat to match. After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Hudson departed for parts unknown.

Hutchinson—Briggs

Erwin Hutchinson of Bethel and Irene Briggs of Albany were united in marriage at the Methodist Parsonage, Wednesday, June 20. Rev. W. R. Patterson officiated, using the double ring service. The couple were unattended.

Mrs. Hutchinson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Briggs. Mr. Hutchinson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hutchinson of Bethel and is employed by the E. L. Tebbets Company at Locke's Mills.

The couple will make their home with his parents on Mill Hill.

Foster—Appleby

Roger L. Foster of Newry and Beatrice Appleby of Brownville were united in marriage at Rumford Center, June 10, by the Rev. Gardner Willis. The double ring service was used.

The bride was dressed in rose flared crepe, with hat to match. Mrs. Foster has just completed her third year of teaching in the Newry Schools.

Mrs. Foster is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Foster of Newry.

Mrs. Gladys P. Rocky

The funeral of Mrs. Gladys Pearl Rocky, who was killed in an automobile accident at Long Island, N. Y., Thursday, was held from the Greenleaf Undertaking Parlor at Bethel, Sunday, at 4:15 p. m., conducted by Rev. W. R. Patterson, pastor of the Methodist church.

She was born in Portland, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Chapman who were formerly Bethel people. Mrs. Rocky, who was a talented musician, was employed for many years with her sister on the Keith circuit, but had accepted a position in New York for the summer, and was to have played at a night club at Long Island on the day of her death.

She is survived by one daughter, Betty, of New York and four sisters, Mrs. Grace Dooley of Portland, and Marie, Dorothy and Elizabeth of New York.

Mrs. L. G. Cole and son Junior, who have been with relatives for the past two months, went to Livermore Falls recently accompanied by her sister, Florence Blake, where they packed Mrs. Cole's household goods and had them moved to Locke's Mills.

Bethel Wins in Fighting Finish

In a fast game with the teams jockeying for the lead throughout, the Bethel team mustered enough of its heavy artillery to win in the ninth in a game played here Wednesday afternoon.

Andover started in the first with one run, but Bethel came back with three in her half. The visitors evened the count in the second. This ended the scoring until the fifth, when Bethel scored one. Andover evened it in the sixth and made it three up in the seventh but Bethel also did some scoring on Win Howe's three hagger with the bases loaded.

Andover scored one in the eighth and apparently was due for a win until Eldredge produced a hit that sent the fleet-footed Scotty across for the winning run, after the latter had scored Young.

The hitting of "Scotty" Robertson, Young and Eldredge featured for the home team, while the general all-around play of Dunning, third baseman for Andover, was excellent.

HOW

COURTSHIP IS CARRIED ON BY LOWER ANIMALS.
 When a young man gives his best girl a box of candy to show his affection, is he making love as only mankind knows how, or are similar courtships practiced by the animals, birds and insects?

Prof. Julian Sorell Huxley of Oxford university has started a vigorous debate among naturalists by telling the British Association for the Advancement of Science that he has seen lowly forms of animal life dance, sing, pose, and give presents, as part of complicated love affairs.

In many ways these courtships are astonishingly like human conduct. Some insects described by Professor Huxley use delicate flower and fruit perfumes to make themselves appealing. Many birds and animals, and even some reptiles, sing love songs to their mates. And dancing is a favorite way among the insects' deep affection.

One kind of hunting spider catches his mate by offering her a choice fly neatly wrapped in silk. This same instinct of giving presents, which figures so largely in human courtships, appears also in the carnivorous flies, empidids. The male of this species makes a flower bouquet for his love. First he blows up a ball of bubbles from a viscous fluid which he secretes, then he attaches it to his legs, and attacks a flower petal or a little leaf in it.

Many butterflies make use of perfume to make themselves attractive to their own kind. The white powder on the wings of the blue garden white butterfly smells delicately of balsam or lemon. Some butterflies have even rose perfume.

Jarflies, crickets and grasshoppers send their love calls far and wide, loudly rattling their wings over their legs.—Elwell Cizeley, in Popular Science Monthly.

How Fire and Insects

Blight Trees' Growth

Fire and insects are often close allies in the work of destroying forest trees, says the Forest Service. A study of an area badly infested with western pine beetle revealed that nearly four times as many trees were killed by the depredations of the insect in a burned-over tract as were killed in the adjacent unburned forest in the last two years.

The study was made by a bureau of entomology crew in the western part of the Modoc National forest and adjacent patented lands in northern California. Insects are causing heavy losses in this region, where about 75 per cent of the merchantable timber is privately owned. In one patch of yellow pine of about 2,500 acres, separated from the main body of timber by open lands, a fire burned over some 1,500 acres in 1924.

Although the fire did not "crown" or burn in the treetops throughout the entire area, the humidity was low and the heat so intense that a great many trees with their needles only partly burned died as a result of the fire. During 1925 and 1926 a great many of the fire-weakened trees in the tract succumbed to the attacks of insects, thus augmenting the fire loss. Trees taken from the green, fire-scorched trees showed a great slowing down to their growth following the fire.

How to Resilver Mirror

Select a sheet of tinfoil of the required size and pour over it three drops of quicksilver for each square foot of foil. Then rub the foil with a piece of buckskin until it becomes brilliant. Lay a sheet of paper over the foil so as to cover its entire surface and place upon the paper a slab of marble or smooth block of wood, adding more weights if necessary to press the foil tightly to the glass. Allow it to stand for three or four hours. If properly done the foil will adhere closely to the glass.—Girl.

How to Disguise Milk

It is a calamity if a child does not care for milk—but if he doesn't, then there are the various ways of offering milk concealed in weak cocoa, milk soups flavored with vegetables; custards, baked and liquid; cream or milk toast; and even ice creams and other desserts made or served with milk (aspic, jellies, milk sherbets and blancmange).—Needcraft Magazine.

How Bracing Saved Trees

Intervenor at six different points by grafts, the three main limbs of an apple tree have been strongly braced to prevent breaking in storms, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The supports are said to be more effective than props and also help to hold up the branches when they are loaded with fruit. It is suggested that the method might probably be adopted in other orchards.

How Toads Drink

Toads do not drink water through the mouth. They do, however, absorb water through their spongy skin.

EAST BETHEL

Mrs. Octavia Bean has returned from Bethel and opened her house for awhile, and her son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Bean, from Phillips, have been with her. They are guests now of Mrs. Bean's relatives in Massachusetts.

ALONG LIFE'S TRAIL

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
 Dean of Men University of Illinois

THE DULL CHILD

I have been put into circumstances, at one time or another when I was forced to tell parents some very disagreeable, not to say tragic, things over a period of years.

I have had to be the first one to communicate these things to the parents of the young people concerned. I may have shrunk back from the unpleasant and difficult task, but if so it was but for a moment; I have braced up and broken the news in as frank, direct and sympathetic way as I could devise. The situation which I have disliked the most was when such a communication had to be made over the telephone. Telephones were never intended for the transmission of such personal messages.

The one thing which I have not yet found a satisfactory way of saying to a parent is that his child is stupid—in fact not mentally capable of doing the work which he has undertaken to do. I can announce frankly that the boy is stupid, indifferent, unwilling to work; I can say that he has bad habits and go into detail as to what these habits are; that he has done this or that which is contrary to law and good morals, but I have not yet developed the courage to say that the child is incapable.

Fortunately such cases are rare but they do exist. In most instances the hopelessly dull child drops out of school before he finishes high school. He shows an inclination to do manual rather than intellectual work, and his parents yield to the pressure which he applies to give up school. But there are cases where pride and ambition blind the parents' eyes, where possibly indifference keeps the child in school, and finally forces him into college, for the work of which he shows neither interest nor ability. It is very hard to convince parents under such circumstances that there is not something radically wrong with college else their son would be making more rapid advancement.

Activity is health producing and invigorating. Knowing this, we find men who compare folly with the lad who was lying still in a health culture class while the teacher asked them to lie on their backs and use their legs as if riding a bicycle. Asked why he was lying still, he replied, "I'm roasting."

A REAL BEAST OF BURDEN

A comparatively few years ago, before our mechanical giants came into being, it was the custom to call the mule the beast of burden. He was regarded as the extreme of patient, working energy. Today the real beast of burden is made of steel instead of flesh and bone, motivated by gasoline instead of blood. It is the "crawler" type tractor.

How to solve farm problems is being demonstrated on 3,000 acres of wheat land owned by Mr. J. R. Whitehouse, son of a former Governor of Oregon. He runs one tractor practically 24 hours daily to pull eight 14-inch plows, plowing to a depth of seven inches. The grade on which the work is being done runs as high as 60 per cent. And for six weeks the tractor has plowed on the average 85 acres of ground daily, without having once stalled off. It is machine methods such as this that are revolutionizing agricultural efficiency.

MULCH PAPER

A new product in New England which is said to be creating great interest in agricultural circles is a mulch paper being produced by the United Paper Co. of East Braintree, Mass. This paper, known as "Farmtex," is used between the rows of growing crops to eliminate weeds, to concentrate heat, to concentrate moisture at the roots of growing plants, and to stimulate chemical reactions caused by bacteria in the soil.

IN SYRIA

A Syrian Rebecca Returning From the Well.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

THE strip of Syria and the Holy Land at the eastern end of the Mediterranean sea has ever been a stage for momentous world events. There the civilizations of Egypt, Mesopotamia and Asia Minor met, their armies marching and counter-marching.

A few miles north of Beirut, at the point where the Dog river enters the sea, the foothills of the Lebanon come down to the very shore of the Mediterranean, and since soldiers and armies have always sought to travel on the level, whether they have fought that way or not, the passage of this point where sea and mountain meet was always a difficult feat.

One army after another cut its path along the towering cliffs, and when the passage of this narrow defile was thus insured, the commanders left the record of their passing. Who the first men were no one knows, for the troops of Napoleon III, in passing this point, were too lazy to turn over a new leaf; they simply inscribed their record on a limestone page from which the record of some ancient Egyptian had been erased by the hand of time.

But the first record that still stands was left by the armies of the most famous of the pharaohs, Rameses the Great, when they were on their way northward to wage war against the Hittites or Hittites.

The great Assyrian, Ashurnasirpal, left his record here and his successors, Shalmaneser and Adadnirari, did the same. Then there was a lapse of more than a century, from 812 to 705 B. C., when Sennacherib and his son, Esarhaddon, had their names chiseled in this stone book of history.

Railways on Old Caravan Routes.

If political conditions become definitely stabilized in this part of the world, it is not too much to believe that heavy trains, fired with oil from the Persian fields, will thunder along trade routes which plodding camels marked out when the world was young. Already, one may dine in Cairo and have luncheon the following day in Jerusalem. The step to Aleppo, Mosul, and Bagdad is short and all but 200 miles of the line is now open to traffic. However popular the route through central Europe along the famous Berlin-to-Bagdad line becomes, the safety of the British empire demands that the railroad which follows the old line of communication between the valley of the Nile and the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris shall be kept in a state of perfection. There will be no Amanus or Taurus tunnels on this trail of the modern caravan, and an absence of heavy grades throughout a large part of the right of way will make it possible for the hoped-for Cairo-to-Calcutta express to beat the fastest sea route by several days.

The Hauran, south of Damascus, has long been a granary and the massive ruins of Banbek dominate a plain whose fertility was once sufficient to make possible lavish local expenditures and at the same time return large taxes to Imperial Rome, which used Syria not as a sinking place for public funds, but as a source of revenue for the treasury on the Tiber. When Rome ruled, this remote province had enough and to spare; but not for long did golden eggs from Syria enrich the greedy Turk.

Water holds a high place, not only in the view of the abstemious Mohammedan, but of the Syrian Christian as well. The main attraction of the Damascus cafe is a tiny fountain, whose sight and sound delight the son of the desert vacationing in the urban oasis, or the Sarr of Samarkand, wearied by his desert march to Mecca, who stops here and dreams of his distant Zaratshan.

From Abraham to Allenby. Dan and Beersheba are popularly considered the termini of Palestine, as they formerly were of Hebrew territory. One grew up around a source of the Jordan, the other owed its existence to the age-old wells whose limestone rims have been grooved and polished by a million bucket ropes. No hotel register attests so long and distinguished a line of guests.

From Abraham to Allenby, the rope-worn signatures that rim Beersheba's seven wells bespeak romance and legends broad as human life. Here

Abraham arrived with Sarah, his wife, and being unused to town ways and fearing them, they registered as brother and sister. Later Sarah induced Abraham to drive Hagar and Ishmael out into the desert to die. Evidently cross-roads life did not improve Sarah's character.

Here Abraham, the father of his race, received a message to kill his only son, Isaac, and from this spot he set out with heavy heart to accomplish the task which he was saved from completing. Here Jacob robbed Esau of his birthright by methods that remind one of Launcelot Gobbo, and here he later stopped when, as an old man, he was on his way to visit his famous son, Joseph, in Egypt.

A single spring determined the site of Nazareth, and Jacob's well still provides water in an otherwise thirsty land. To the tired traveler from the hills of Moab, the dirty Jordan seems a blessed refreshment after the dry ride; but Nannan, the leper, because he was accustomed to the crystal streams of his native city, scorned the coffee-colored flood which had been recommended to him as a cleansing agent.

Water bounds Syria on the west. The lack of it defines the eastern and southern boundaries. Many of the most pleasing pages of the Bible ripple with the songs of running brooks or praise the "still waters" of wells which have long marked the resting places of weary flocks and heavy-laden caravans.

In Lebanon there are scores of springs and rivers gushing forth direct from the rock. The whole countryside facing the Mediterranean suggests the passage of a miracle-working Moses, practicing in these glorious dells the more difficult feat he was to perform in parched Sinai.

Even on the hot plain between Mount Hermon and the Lake of Huleh the water which bubbles up from subterranean sources is very cold. At Shiba, high up on the sides of Mount Hermon, the water emerges from the rock with a temperature of 33 degrees Fahrenheit, and at Banias, where a temple to Pan once stood, and where Herod the Great erected a temple, over the spring in honor of Augustus, the sparkling water has a temperature of 42 degrees. In summer, after a long hot walk across the plain, it is most refreshing to sit in the shade of Honeysuckle and eat luscious Lebanon grapes, cooled by dipping them in the living water of the stream.

Bathing in the Dead Sea.

The Jericho region is supplied with three kinds of water, and this prodigality, coupled with the historic fame of the Jordan valley, has furnished a regular formula of bathing for pilgrims to this hot depression, nearly a quarter of a mile below the level of the sea.

Of course, every tourist has to bathe in the Dead sea; it is the thing to do. Lucky is the man whose skin does not crack in the heat of the valley, for Dead sea water on a cracked skin or the film of the eye reminds one of boiling oil and the Spanish Inquisition. Having performed the necessary rite and dutifully completed an experience which can be recorded in the diary of the trip, the poor pilgrim, laved with a tenuous fluid that seems to be composed of salt, borax, and lye, drives off to the Jordan and seeks relief in the muddy waters of that river. Then, as night rapidly settles in the deepest wrinkles on the face of Mother Earth, the tired traveler rides between the miserable loads which constitute modern Jericho and dismounts at the Sultan's spring, once sweetened by Elhan.

The traveler who is wise will not try to sleep in the hot hotel, whose confining walls seem to radiate discomfort, but will stretch his bed beside the still waters of Sultan's pool.

Water or the lack of it must always affect the development of Syria, but the supreme value of the land as a link between the production centers of Europe and the population centers of Asia must always make trade routes and crossroads of traffic the locations for largest growth.

No amount of commercial travel, however, can cloud the importance of the heights where Judaism rose and declined and where Christ lived, taught, healed, and died.

WEST PARIS

St. John's Day was observed at the United Parish Church Sunday morning. Granite Lodge, F. and A. M., attended officially. Rev. James W. Barr gave an interesting sermon and a trio of male voices composed of Rev. J. W. Barr, William Edmunds and John Brock sang selections, the music also being supplemented by a chorus of young ladies.

The Friendly Class of the Universalist Church will give a silver tea at Good Will Hall Thursday afternoon. A program is prepared and a cordial invitation is extended to everyone to attend.

The United Parish Church will be closed during the first three Sundays of July, Rev. Mr. Barr finding it convenient to take their vacations at this time and the arrangement making it possible to have church services in the community during the season. The Universalist will close the last Sunday in July and during the month of August.

Art Treasures Found
Under Italian Cities

Almost any Italian public improvement or building construction which involves excavation is likely to turn up archaeological curiosities, if not treasures. This is particularly true of ancient centers, like Rome or Naples, where one community lives on top of what was the site of an earlier community. Beautiful vases were turned up by workmen when Rome's stately Via Veneto was repaired recently.

A teamster engaged in carting away earth for a port improvement at Ancona found a collection of valuable gold coins. Heavy rains in recent months brought to light a magnificent Roman mosaic at Gergenti, near Naples. The mosaic was originally discovered in 1890, but was covered up
"to avoid spoiling the street."

It was forgotten until the rain revealed it as a rare and beautiful work of art. It has now been lifted and transported to the archeological museum at Naples. The mosaic consists of a central square 7 feet 7 inches by 555 feet 10 inches, decorated with geometrical designs, rosettes, stars and vividly tinted yellows, reds and blues.
The mosaic weighs four tons and measures 293 square feet.

Wise Man Said, First
Be Sure You're Right

Before we pride ourselves upon that courage which makes us speak rather than to preserve that silence which we are so often advised is golden, let us be very sure that our convictions are worthy of the courage of which we boast. In the first place, are they convictions or merely slogan expressions which we have encouraged ourselves to regard as beliefs? Have we thought about them profoundly? Have we taken the trouble of investigating the roots from which they spring? Have we made them part of us through observation, experience and a prayerful desire to know what is truth and thereafter to be loyal and vigorous in our support of it? Have we any reason to be sure we are right before we scream out our confidence upon the households? Perhaps, a little more humility as regards one's convictions might not be so bad after all. To be modest and reserved at times requires, perhaps, even a higher grade of courage than to strut about and shout and proclaim ourselves to be the heroes of the world.—Elizabeth Marbury in Du-linator.

The Dogmatic Martyr

When I believe something, I never attribute the least dogmatic significance to my belief. That which I call my faith is merely an indication that for me, with my own personal aptitudes, experiences and mentality, a certain particular explanation seems to dispose most plausibly of a certain particular phenomenon. It is by no means an indication that I should be prepared to face death for my beliefs, or in other words, to prove that my individual experiences have a universal validity and my individual ways of thinking should be shared by every one. Martyrdom always shows the intensity of our beliefs, never their justice. We cannot prevail upon others to share our faith. At the very best we can only try to convince them of our willingness to be martyred.—Arthur Scholizer, in Vanity Fair.

Eskimo Lamps

It is believed that the Eskimo lamp was invented before its possessors emigrated from their original home, which was probably farther south and near the sea coast. But the form of the lamp becomes more specialized the higher the latitude is.
The lamps of southern Alaska have a wick edge of 2 inches, while those of Point Barrow and northern Greenland have wick edges of 17 to 20 inches. The lamp is employed for melting snow and ice to obtain drinking water, warming, drying skins and in the arts. It is also a social factor and the sign of the family unit, each head of the family having his lamp.

Mark Twain a Believer

Mark Twain (Samuel Clemens) was not affiliated with any church or religious organization. He was what is usually called a "free thinker," that is, he did not accept the Scriptures as inspired or authoritative spiritual writings. He was often accused by his enemies of dealing with sacred things in a somewhat irreverent manner. Upon one occasion Mark Twain wrote:
"I have never seen what seemed to me an atom of proof that there is a future life. And yet—I am strongly inclined to expect one."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Diamond Choir

There's still a laugh in this belated story of Polo Negri. Among those who greeted her on her arrival in this country were some members of the Los Angeles baseball team.
They tried to explain the game to her telling of the nine men on a side and so forth. Finally Polo Negri turned to one of them and asked: "What do you play?"

"Third base," was the reply.
"My, what a deep voice you must have!"

Good morning, motor!

"GOOD morning, Ross. Say, talking about horrible examples, you ought to look over that car next door. He was just coughing the sudden across the hedge. Seems that his boss is a baggins hunter—drives all over town looking for cheap hobo gas. Whenever he sees a pump with a cut price, he fills the tank. Buys his oil at the same places. If ever a motor had the T. B., that poor car has it. He's so choked up he can hardly inhale his gas. His bearings are so worn and loose, it sounds like a milk wagon going over cobblestones even when he's idling. Says his cylinders are in terrible shape. When he was new a year ago, he did eighteen to the gallon and only gets about seven now. Ain't it a pity, Ross? There ought to be a law against abusing motors."

TWELVE LITTLE GOSLINGS

(By D. J. Walsh.)

ALBERTA was the most determined baby that ever was born. Her mother said so again and again. When she wanted anything she made life miserable for those around her until she got it.

Alberta's mother was very wise, however, and little by little she trained her to see that others had rights that must be respected and that there were times when life makes the strongest field.

Alberta's ambition from her earliest days was to teach school. There she could be in absolute control. She could not need to be constantly depending on the rights and power of those above her.

So she entered a normal, majoring in manual training. She confidently expected to be elected at once as special manual training teacher in the city schools. An ideal position this, here she could tell both pupils and teachers to do this and so, knowing her control was absolute in her line.

She was too inexperienced to know that teachers must reckon with the school board, which is in absolute control of their destinies in that particular line at least. So she was shocked and surprised to find she was loftily omitted from the list of teachers for the coming term.

There was nothing to do but seek experience in the rural districts and Alberta found their ranks were well filled by this time, so well, in fact, that the only thing she could get was a school in the tiny village of Brierley.

This school had the reputation of being very hard to manage. Indeed, in the year preceding one of the teachers had been literally dragged out of the school room by her hair.

If the pupils had seen the thin rim line of Alberta's lips and the deep look in her deep blue eyes as she turned this occurrence over in her mind they would have gleefully laid plans for the winter's battle.

They would have a hard time dragging her out by the hair. Alberta talked to herself as she ran her fingers through her curly shingled bob.

Alberta loved the sleepy little village at once, where chickens strolled lazily along the few side streets, a contented cow or two grazed along the roadside, and dogs and cats marched superciliously hither and yon.

She was surprised, too, at the tasteful house dresses of the mothers, the collegiate sweaters of the young men and the modish frocks of the girls. Rural communities evidently were much more up to date than had been led to believe.

She unpacked her manual training kit and had it all ready before she opened her trunk. Manual training was evidently a new idea in this blase hamlet and her new pupils looked at her outfit with unconcealed interest.

She looked at them with condescending trepidation. There were forty of them, ranging from the lowest possible admittance age to three or four years younger than herself. These again were to be under her absolute control.

Alberta's indomitable spirit quailed at the trembling of her slim 5 feet 2 inch body. With outward calm, watched by growing inward quiet, she seated her school in classes, assigned lessons and announced that her class that attended to lessons and her best should be allowed the last hour for a manual training exercise.

Of course, baby bodies accustomed to freedom could not be perfectly still, nor could the intermediates with their live-wire attributes, so the old ones had the first lesson. It is hard to tell whether they or their brothers were the most impressed.

Like a real general, Alberta followed up this obvious advantage. Rich was reinforced by her inherent ability to control others and her king of her own way.

Alberta had a superstitious belief in the saying of one of her own old teachers that the first two weeks of a term of school was a battle, open and concealed, between the power of a teacher and that of the pupils. She never held the situation at the end of those two weeks.

There was nothing to worry Alberta except the undertone of menace in the attitude of Ida Lohand. She was dark, tall, and in the highest class. The daughter of a farmer, her almost black hair, the softness of her full red lips and her natural leadership made her something that one would prefer to see at the head of an army.

It was Thursday afternoon of the second week before any outward break came. Then Ida finally decided not to let her history lesson. The day was hot, Alberta was a trifle tired herself, when Ida could not answer Alberta's question as to why she was late.

"Stay in," echoed Ida. "If I like a small child, I will go home first."

"If you go home you must stay there until you are willing to stay and teach," said Alberta calmly as she glanced at the class. A wild exclamation raced through her veins as she saw that a runner who sets out a race. She was to test her power with a foe worthy of her steel.

Ida went home at recess, making a ceremony of it before the other pupils as she mounted her horse. Alberta seemed oblivious, but as the very day drew toward its close and the heat seemed to increase, she felt a feeling of redefining. It might be a war between Alberta alone against Ida and the community.

She went sedately to her boarding place, bathed and put on a white dress with here and there a dash of yellow that exactly matched her close cropped curls. She went down to the porch where sat her boarding house keeper.

With her was Ida's father!

"What do you mean by sending my girl home?" He rose, raging. "Do you realize that I am president of the school board and that if you begin any high-handed moves around here you are likely to find yourself somewhere else? I want Ida to have an education and she is going to school tomorrow. She is not to be coerced and humiliated before the rest of the pupils. See?"

"If she comes back, she must remain in and recite her lesson as I told her. I am in absolute control of the school at present," Ida moved undisturbed to the table, cut three pieces of cake and sat down to eat her share.

Mr. Lohand's upper lip twitched a little at the corner. Ida would have known he had surrendered. "Little thoroughbred," he thought to himself, "and the gold of her hair and dress looks like moonlight." He enjoyed his cake, too. The wife he had lost made dainty things like that for him, but Chloe the dusky cook, Mr. Lohand, and Ida cared very little for fragile things. Materialistic is the word Mr. Lohand would have applied to them had he known it.

"How did your last crop of alfalfa come out?" inquired the boarding house keeper, tactfully.

"Fine. The best yet. And what do you think we found? The big goose. Mr. Lohand, stole her nest and there she was with twelve goslings this time of year. Just like a goose."

"I never saw goslings," exclaimed Alberta, "but I love little chickens, ducklings and turkeys. There is a set store a few blocks from where I live and it is a wonder they do not charge me for looking into their windows."

"You could have these goslings if you wanted to bother with them," said Mr. Lohand.

"You could keep them in Biddy's pen," said the landlady.

So Alberta became the proud and enamored possessor of twelve little goslings. The very next day when Ida also nonchalantly came back to school, stayed in and recited her lesson. Not without a home battle, however. Her father had raged at her, too, and threatened not to give her the car he promised her. In her heart she wanted to go back. School, manual training, and a certain boy there of her own age made life at home seem tame. Then, too, she had a secret admiration for Alberta, who could manage her father better than she could, after a lifetime of experience.

So Alberta knew she was indeed in absolute control of her school when she closed the door on Friday of the second week. This proved to be true and the community admitted she was the best teacher they ever had, though of course they could not afford to keep her. Some city school would be sure to see her worth and take her from them.

It might have turned out that way if it had not been for the intriguing way those twelve little goslings put out their feathers and grew and grew in Alberta's soul grew, too, a great longing to see other tiny things grow, and on Mr. Lohand's ranch there were young chickens, puppies, kittens, calves and even pigs, something all the time. So it is any wonder she gave up teaching and went to the ranch to live happily ever after?

Besides, it really was quite necessary for some one to have absolute control of Mr. and Mrs. Lohand, who had been running wild for so long, and who loved Alberta with their whole hearts.

Peculiar Glass That Shuts Out Sun's Heat

It is said that there is a window glass of Austrian invention whose chief peculiarity is that it prevents the passage of about nine-tenths of the heat of the sun's rays. It is well known that ordinary window glass allows nearly all of the heat derived from the sun to pass through, but, on the other hand, intercepts nearly all heat coming from nonluminous sources, such as a stove or the heated ground. This is the reason why heat accumulates under the glass roof of a hothouse.

If covered with the Austrian glass a hothouse would become most decidedly a cold house, since the heat could not get into it.

One advantage claimed for the Austrian glass is that a house whose windows were furnished with it would remain delightfully cool in summer, but in winter, perhaps, the situation would not be so agreeable. Indeed, the panes would have to be exchanged for others of ordinary glass, since otherwise no sun heat could enter the house.

Confidential Letters

With an interesting political campaign approaching, doubtless there are those who will wish to get messages to their friends with the assurance that letters will not be opened by the wrong persons. Away back in Civil War times somebody asked Secretary Stanton, "How can I manage so that confidential letters will reach you?"

"By not writing 'Private' along with the address outside, for in that case the letters are sure to be opened before I see them."

Word Wheat in Bible

The name wheat occurs more than 100 times in the Old and New Testaments.

SUCCINCTLY SAID

Two heads of the family are not better than one.

High words are often used to express low language.

The only thing that beats a good wife is a bad husband.

Don't forget that pecuniary charity is often a curse to humanity.

Occasionally there is a man wise enough to think poetry without writing it.

It is about as hard for a man to keep a diary as for a woman to keep a sharp lead pencil.

FLYING CHAFF

Could knows that a great deal of his work is unimportant.

When one is old and tired out, the simple life is anything enough.

Reforming another man seldom produces results that are very brilliant.

Manner in which some sympathize with you is to tell you all their own troubles.

There is the type of man who, if he can't have his own way, will go somewhere else.

A smart bean who can make all the girls laugh knows very well that that wins no hearts.

Do we expect too much of life; and too much of matrimony; and too much of money?

Putting your shoulder to the wheel keeps you from having to put your nose to the grindstone.

By the age of forty, one may cease to be impudent. By that time, he has accumulated enough bruises.

Magical poetry is the kind that sounds melodious as well as making beautiful images. Poe could write it.

Kind-hearted people frequently join in the applause because they feel that it is so weak it will hurt the feelings of the performer.

NEW PROVERBS

The eighty-ninth literary competition in the London-Saturday Review was set by Elizabeth Rhesco. The princess called for original proverbs. Here are a few of those received:

Happiness has a slippery doorstep.

The proof of the missionary is in the eating.

Smile at a peach and make a pair.

Things are not always what they seem.

There's many a slip 'twixt the rattle-toe and the lip.

Do not put all your needles in one haystack.

Many a price tag is without honor on a Christmas gift.—Boston Transcript.

SAID IN FUN

Muggins—"Say what you will of that fellow Skinnum, he has a mighty strong face." Buggins—"He ought to have. He goes through life on his cheek."

"Gold is dress. Lay up treasures in heaven," admonished the good deacon. "Yet many a man's mansion in the sky is built of the gold bricks he has invested in," replied the unregenerate backslider.

Mrs. Wigwag—"Our minister's wife says she suffers terribly from insomnia." Mr. Wigwag—"Insomnia, eh? She ought to be able to cure that by listening to some of her husband's sermons."

Muggins—"I've changed my opinion of Buggins. I always used to think he was one of those men who are born to command." Buggins—"What happened to change your opinion?" Muggins—"He got married the other day."

FIELD OF INDUSTRY

Italian experimenters have had success in the use of natural gas instead of gasoline in automobiles.

The Philippine bureau of agriculture is taking steps to encourage rubber planting in the islands.

The construction of a completely equipped air port at an estimated cost of $1,250,000 is being planned at Buenos Aires.

All maritime countries except the United States, France and Italy are building more ships at present than a year ago, and Germany has advanced from fifth to second place.

"AVIATION BUSINESS"

Aviation is today no longer "a game" but a full-fledged business, capable of development far beyond its present status, business men from all over New England attending the Second New England Aviation Conference held under the auspices of the New England Council here today, were told by Anson A. Bigelow, vice-president of Black and Bigelow of New York City, speaking on "Aviation Business."

"Aviation has been used in a multitude of ways by industries of every kind and description," he said. "It is playing a prominent part in speeding up communication and transportation, in carrying mail, express and passengers, in surveying, in dusting crops, in inspecting properties, in advertising, and in extending the territory and scope of the salesman."

"Those among you who are manufacturers would undoubtedly welcome the addition to your line of a product which could be produced at a profitable figure and find a large market. Look to the aviation industry. Those engaged in the manufacture of planes and engines are primarily specialists, devoting every energy to the completed product. Every airplane built in this country is an assembly job. Of the hundred or more manufacturers there are only one or two making even engines as well. They buy fabric, paint, lumber, steel tubing, wire, turn buckles, wheels, brakes, tires, seats and instruments and will soon be in the market for a complete line of upper and lower berths and electric cooking utensils. The engine manufacturers buy their magnetos, starters, spark plugs, valves, and so on and in the majority of cases farm out rough castings to foundries."

"You who have carried on the same business for generations no doubt regard an increase of five per cent yearly in your sales as indicative of good progress. Don't forget that this aviation industry is increasing by hundreds and thousands of per cent, and that what now may seem a small market has every chance of shortly becoming a great one."

AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION

A double radio program will be broadcast on the night of July 2 over two radio stations by Shenandoah, Ia., post of the American Legion in the interest of the tenth national Legion convention, to be held at San Antonio, Texas, October 8 to 12, according to an announcement made by C. E. Parker, service officer of the post.

The first program will be put on the air between 7 and 8 p. m. (Central Standard Time) over Station KXNF, operated by the Henry Field Seed Company, on a wave length of 461.3 meters and 650 kilocycles. Special permission was obtained from the federal radio commission for staging this program.

Station KMA (394.5 meters, 760 kilocycles), operated by the May Seed and Nursery Co., will broadcast the second program of the evening between 8 and 9 p. m.

A variety of musical numbers will be included in each program. Brief talks outlining plans for the national convention, especially the big entertainment program to be staged will be made.

Plans are being worked out by the post for a special train to the convention at San Antonio. Other posts in the vicinity are invited to join with the local post in the convention tour.

WHY

Air and Light Are Necessary for Goldfish

There are two facts that owners of live goldfish need to know. One is that fish, in general, live where there is plenty of shade and their eyelids are entirely absent.

Therefore, when fish are put into transparent globes which admit all the light there is and from all directions at once, fish cannot cover their eyes and cannot find a shady place in which to hide.

Small objects, such as water plants, floating pieces of wood, and stones, or "castles" sold by stores, can be put into the bowls to make shadows.

The other is that there is air in the water where fish live in nature. Aerated water is a necessity for life for fish.

Water in globes is still and free from air and needs aerating by means of water plants and fresh-poured water.

The use of a syringe forcing bubbles into the water is still better. Growing water plants are most desirable.

The water must be changed regularly. Fish in still water in globes swim around with gaping mouths, gasping for breath, and may soon actually smother for lack of air.

People who enjoy seeing fish in globes and who allow children to enjoy watching them will do well to consider the virtue of kindness to animals, even toward goldfish.

They may, on second thoughts, decide that the possible injury to children when amused by the sight of live animals in confinement is unimportant in comparison of the more important consideration of fish—American Humane Education Society.

Why Official Salute Is Arbitrarily Fixed

A reader writes: "On April 9, 1914 United States sailors were arrested by Mexican sailors, without justification, at Tampico, Mexico. When General Huerta heard of this he sent his apology, but Admiral Mayo demanded from them a salute of 21 guns. This Huerta refused. Why should they salute the flag with this specific number of guns?"

It is because the international salute consists of 21 guns. Just why it consists of that particular number is uncertain. It was copied from the British national salute. The British for generations have saluted the anniversary days of the birth, accession, and coronation of the king, birth of the queen, restoration of Charles II, the Gunpowder plot and similar national events with a salute of 21 guns.

This salute in great Britain corresponds to our salute to the "Union," which consists of one gun for each state. We salute our President with a salute of 21 guns, the same as the international salute.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Why Secret Is Valuable

One camphor tree will produce solid camphor, another, although similar in appearance, will produce only camphor oil, which is far less valuable. The reason of this is not known except to a comparatively few persons who are keeping it a secret.

Botanists in many parts of the world are endeavoring to work it out, so far without success.

Centuries ago the secret was known only to Chinese botanists and they employed it to great advantage. It was also discovered by the Japanese in 1895, when Formosa was ceded to Japan. But the rest of the world remains in ignorance.

The discovery of the camphor tree's secret would be of immense commercial value, and it would lead to Japan losing her present monopoly of this product.

Why Lips Are Red

What we call our skin is really the outermost of several skins, a sort of shell to protect the true skin underneath. On the lips, however, this shell is absent, to allow us to be as sensitive as possible to the foods that we take into our mouth.

Only the thinnest of skins is found here, and so thin indeed is it as to be actually transparent, showing the course underneath with all its tiny blood vessels. These are the vessels that we see through the delicate skin of the lips, and if the body is in good health and the blood rich and red, too, consequently they form to the doctor a safe working guide to the state of health, acids and other ailments being at once reflected in the paleness, dryness, and so on of the lips.

Why Bee Is Man's Friend

"The culture is the most essential branch of agriculture." That is the opinion of Prof. Ernst Zander of Erlangen university in Germany. He bases his high estimate of the bee industry on the fact that billions of flowers are fertilized by these insects.

Fruit trees, vegetables, clovers, flowers—all depend on the bee for fertilization. It is the bee that carries the pollen from one blossom to another. Professor Zander estimates the bee population of his country at 60,000,000,000. These bees produce about $7,000,000,000 worth of honey annually, no mean economic item itself.

Why Ship Is "She"

This custom has been handed down from remote times. The word is given the feminine gender in the English language because it was feminine in the original tongue.

Mrs. A. E. K. Grover

The community was saddened to hear of the passing on of Mrs. Alcina Ellen Kendall Grover Wednesday forenoon, June 26th. She will be much missed by a wide circle of relatives and friends both in Maine and Massachusetts. She had been in rather frail health for many years but had made fight of it.

She was the daughter of Justice J. J. Grover and Marcia A. (Merrill) Kendall, and was born in 1858 at their home in the beautiful Sunday River valley in the town of Newry. There were six sisters and three brothers to enjoy life with her.

One sister died in infancy but the others grew to man and womanhood. One by one they all passed on until only nephews and nieces are left.

Mrs. Grover was educated in the town schools and Gould Academy and was a very successful teacher for many years, even after her marriage to George Eddy Grover of Albany, where they lived on a small farm just beyond Hunt's Corner on the Norway road, later moving to another farm on the Valley Road below what was then known as Fernald's Mills.

The lessons her pupils learned were not to be forgotten easily, and she cared for them all like a mother, binding their hearts, their ill and childhood troubles and teaching them many a lesson in manners and good citizenship. In fact she was one of those valiant old fashioned teachers who are fast becoming but a memory of the past when teachers taught school for the love of it, not for the fun of it as many do nowadays.

After she gave up teaching, they sold their farm and purchased the place now owned by A. A. Bruce at Albany Town House, Four Corners, where they conducted a country store for a number of years. The health of both Mr. and Mrs. Grover caused them to sell and they purchased a home in Norway village. While living in Albany, Mrs. Grover became a member of Round Mountain Grange where she served as Lecturer and in other ways proved her worth as a true Patron of Husbandry.

After living in Norway for a few years they moved to South Bethel, where Mr. Grover passed away in October 1919, after a long and painful illness, faithfully cared for by his wife. After his death she sold the place and spent some time with relatives and friends in Massachusetts. After recovering her vitality she returned to Maine and for some time was housekeeper for Miss Libby, the photographer of Norway, and her aged father. While there she had her membership transferred to Norway Grange where she served as Lecturer for some time.

She was intensely interested in the work of the order and was a member of Oxford Pomona, the Maine State and the National Grange. She was a well read woman who kept abreast of the times in all worth-while events.

After the death of her sister, Georgianna Smith she kept the home area for her nephew and niece, Daniel and Ruby Smith. After the niece's marriage, she mothered the nephew as though her own son. Since his marriage she has lived alone, keeping the old home open for him and their many friends and relatives who were always sure of a welcome from her.

She had been up and about the home as usual and had phoned friends. Death came with no visible pain, just as she wanted to go. A profusion of flowers were silent tokens of esteem. Bethel Grange attended in a body.

Rev. Mr. Sinclair of Gorham, N. H., spoke words of sympathy to the relatives, neighbors and friends gathered in silent tribute. The services were conducted by S. S. Greenleaf in a most efficient manner. The bearers were four nephews, Sherman Merrill of Auburn, Dean Swan of Swan's Corner, Daniel Smith of Bethel and Anson Kendall of Cambridge, Mass. Interment was in the old family lot in Sunday River Cemetery in her beloved Sunday River Valley.

Only asleep she seemed to lay, Folded in peace she had answered the call That comes to all of us some day, The call of the Master who knoweth all.

A life of service thru good will, Faith to the brim the cup was filled; Drained to the dregs with a right good will, True to her trust when the heart was stilled.

Grieve not for her, she has gone before, Up the shining pathway thru the open door, When we pass o'er the river and up the shining shore, Her smile will bid us welcome as did in days of yore.

By a pupil who has not forgotten the lessons a beloved teacher taught.
